

Willsborough Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, MAR. 29, 1876.

Edwin Booth realized $32,000 by his Southern tour.

Chas. F. Nash and wife arrived New York 21 inst. and will leave for Washington to-night.

The New York Herald has been sued by O. M. Robbins, for libel, with damages at $100,000.

Ex-Gov. Letcher, of Virginia, continues to improve, and hopes soon to return to his legislative duties.

Had, used on a railroad engine, and says it should be so constructed when displayed on a man's nose.

The great the body convention at Elmwood unanimously decided that Central and extension tickets should be good for sixty days.

Gov. Brocken has offered a reward of $200 for the apprehension of the negro Look, who is charged with the murder of Barringer.

The Democrats of Burke county have held their County Convention and elected delegates to the State Convention instructed to go for Zell.

The wife of ex-Senator Carl Schurz died in New York on Wednesday afternoon of puerperal fever. Mr. Schurz's father died recently in Illinois.

Evans, the Fort Hill post rider, generally substantiates Marsh. Evans paid him $1,000 for an introduction to Helknap. Rice wanted $1,500.

The editor of the Charlotte Democrat opened a hundred and fifty shelled bodies of the nation, sunning themselves on a corner one day last week.

No, Mrs. Henry; no! said John, in tones of solemn warning. Look at Mrs. Balknap. She wanted a few dollars, too; and see where she is now! Stick to your calico, Mrs. Henry, and avoid the insidious voice of the tempter.

A Fort Laramie dispatch reports a fight between Indians and miners at Dead Wood Creek, 60 miles northwest of this place. The miners attacked the Indians, killing 13 and losing one. The Indians had stolen stock. More trouble is expected.

The Mt. Airy Watchman of last week tells us that Judge Cloud so far forgot the dignity of the bench while holding court in Berry county, last week, as to take the clerk, Mr. Norman, by the collar and pitch him out of the court house. Cloud is a beautiful specimen of North Carolina Radicalism.

The Portsmouth Enterprise says: Saturday and Sunday nights gave us an extremely severe snap of bitter weather, and the reports from the trucks yesterday morning were very discouraging for the coming crops. Large numbers of peas were destroyed, together with quantities of early radishes and potatoes. Strawberries and the pears in bloom were injured to a serious extent, and the few peaches left from the former freeze succumbed on Sunday. The Bartlett pear is not in bloom yet and unopened. Apples are also backward in blooming. The principal loss is in the early peas.

The New York Tribune says: There is a disposition in the administration journals to apply offensive epithets to Brother Orylle. This is unjust. There is nothing mean about him. When the Presidential hand, grasping him firmly by the sleeve of the pantalons, lifted him from the gutter of his financial failure and set him up as a broker in post-trustships, Orylle accepted the position, as any other in like straits would have done. The able editors are hitting the wrong man.

The Charlotte Observer calls the attention of its readers to the fact that deeds and mortgages are worthless until they are recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds. Our contemporary cites a case of considerable loss arising from the neglect of this important matter. A citizen of Mecklenburg county had given a mortgage to a neighbor upon certain property for a considerable amount. The neighbor laid the instrument carefully away at home, where no harm could befall it, and a few days ago executors were obtained against the mortgagor for all that he is worth if not more. Upon learning of this the mortgagor remembered that the mortgage had never been registered, and that all of these judgments came in before it, and that he was, on the whole a mount of money which he had advanced on the mortgage. So that your deeds and mortgages are registered.

COMMENCEMENT AT THE UNIVERSITY.

We are pleased to learn that the exercises at the approaching Commencement will be of such a character as to induce a very large attendance, at the Hall on the first Thursday of June.

During the week it is expected that a very large number of students will be present.

That an address will be delivered by the Hon. Alfred Waddell the member of Congress from the Wilmington District before the two Societies of the University.

A Memorial Oration by Ex-Gov. Vance on the life and services of the late Governor David L. Swain, at the request of the Trustees of the University. As the University will furnish no graduates for this Commencement the Societies and the Faculty will select from the students, competitors and declaimers for the evening entertainment.

A good number of students will be in attendance for the exercises in the College Chapel, and again we may expect to see the Hall of the College Library filled with the youth and beauty of the State, moving to the strains of joyous music in the graceful Cotillion and Waltz. The Hotel is in the hands of those who know how to make the visitors comfortable, and simple accommodations will be furnished in the village to all who may attend. We know that the public are impatient to see this long cherished institution well under way in the education of the sons of the State; and we are sure that those who have it in charge will fail in no duty. Public interest is deeply excited in its behalf and the reputation of the distinguished speakers will without doubt invite a very large attendance—and all will be pleased to see how far the citizens of the village have succeeded in setting things in order.

THE ROBESON CASE.

The Wilmington Star says: It seems from the decision of the United States Commissioner, yesterday, that Gen. Cox was not finally discharged on last Saturday, as was supposed. He is cited to appear at the next term of the Circuit Court at Raleigh, to answer the exploded charge of conspiracy, together with four of the county Commissioners of Robeson County. The latter gentlemen are found over in the sum of $2,000 each. They have been put to much wrong and expense about this foolishness, having been drawn from their homes and detained here several days in attendance upon the sittings of this tribunal. The prosecution has been conducted solely in partisan interests and with partisan bitterness.

The bringing in of Gen. Cox, after the District Attorney had entered a not, pro, is a rare and radiant proceeding.

The New York Tribune makes light of the Republican victory in New Hampshire. It thinks the Dutch have simply taken Helknap. The South, the Tribune thinks, and correctly, will, with the exception of South Carolina, and possibly Florida, cast its vote for the Democratic candidate. One hundred and twenty seven votes this conceded is a fair start, and with the 50 votes of New York, Connecticut, and New Jersey, now decidedly Democratic, we may with confidence lay claim to 177 votes, but seven less than a majority of the Electoral College. At the last election California, Oregon, Nevada, and Colorado wheeled in line with their 15 votes, and we have every reason to believe will stand firm in the Democratic column. Indiana, too, gives no indication of deserting with her 15 votes. So that, unless our leaders at St. Louis are stone-stupid, the nominees to be there selected can count with almost absolute certainty upon 207 votes—184 will be sufficient. Our second would be, to make sure of New York, Connecticut, and New Jersey; the seven votes lacking will certainly be made good.

The Wilmington Journal says: We see from the papers that Robert White's stable at Lynckburg, Va., was burnt last Friday night and with it perished Proney, a very promising trotting mare valued at $2,500, and owned, as the Lynckburg papers has it, by George Williams of this State. We feel sure though it is the blooded mare of Col. George Williamson of Vancesville, and late Senator from Orange and Caswell. We trust we may be mistaken, but feel certain we are not. Burned with the same stable was a sorrel colt Danville, owned by Sprague and W. D. Kenn, and valued at $1,500. Also Nelly Woodson, a running mare owned by Sprague and valued at $300.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The good work in Congress still goes heavily on. The Democrats are determined that a complete exposure of the corruption of Radicals will be made. Mr. Vance in his special message, last week, said, "it is our duty to see that the people are not misled by the false promises of the Radicals." The House will not be deterred by the Radicals' tactics. The people will turn from Radicals with disgust because they will see it is not on other names for thievery. One thing the Committee should remember, that whenever their conditions are that a Democrat has been a party to any of this thievery, that he should be treated exactly as the Radicals are now exposed without fear or favor. What the people want is the certainty that they will have honest men in office. They do not care as much for the name, will not be misled by the name, but whether he is honest and competent. They want a return to the Jeffersonian doctrine of the House. The Democrats in the House can prove their patriotism for this reform. The return to this principle, by exposing the Democratic thievery, they find they are actually doing it. So far the record of the House is good, though not so good as it should have been. The House differences in the party should have been settled sooner. After a long time they have agreed, but they should not have been so tardy in doing it. Then they have in some instances deferred too much to what might or might not be popularity in the campaign. Prompt and united action on their part would have given popularity to any good measure. This has been most notably shown in the bill to aid in the construction of the Texas and Pacific Railroad. The Committee long since agreed upon a bill, which all, who have considered the question fully, agree would be of incalculable benefit to the country, and yet this bill is retarded because there are some, who admitting its necessity, are afraid that it might injure "the party" by being forward. When the house of Jay Gould said that they would spend a sea load of money to defeat this bill, it is remembered, the men who cause this delay make themselves liable to unpleasant comments. Then the appropriation bills have been delayed too much. It is true that it required an immense amount of labor to get all the data necessary to make the proper reductions from the extravagant radical estimate; but with more help it could have been done earlier.

I make these comments, because our Democratic papers should speak frankly to the people. The Congressmen can know what the people expect of them. No elaborate platform building in Congress is wanted. All that is needed is to secure victory and good government, in an honest way of the present day. And therefore I say that while Congress has done well, it might have done better.

Mr. Helknap returned and testified before the Judiciary Committee which will present the articles of impeachment against Helknap to the Senate on Tuesday or Wednesday, of next week. His testimony has been taken before the Grand Jury and it is supposed that the indictment and trial for bribery will follow the impeachment trial.

The Republican Senators have determined to resist the reductions of expenditures made in the house. A motion was held on the subject and this determination is the result of that caucus. They will claim that the reduction proposed will impair the efficiency of the civil service and will use as their campaign argument on this subject the plain cry that the Democrats are trying to cripple the government. This is to be an adjunct to the "bloody shirt," which it seems to be the banner, under which the radical cohorts will march, no matter who may be their standard bearer. The action of the New York Convention in endorsing Conkling is a serious blow to Blaine, as Conkling hates Blaine and if he cannot be nominated himself will use the delegation from his State to defeat Blaine. Among Democratic candidates for the St. Louis nomination, the name of Judge Thurman is now very prominent, perhaps more so than that of any one else except Governor Hendricks. Thides seems to have been dropped, though when the Convention meets he will be a most formidable competitor and Pendleton is out of politics now. The news from abroad is of no interest. Queen Victoria has been given the title of Empress of India and Spain is entirely at Peace. The rebellion in Turkey is still in progress, but small progress is made.

The Milton Chronicle says: How are the Delegates to the Democratic Conservative Convention to be held at St. Louis to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President to be appointed? Of course the State Convention to assemble at Raleigh will appoint the two delegates at large to which the State is entitled. But how are the district delegates to be appointed? Centralization is the order of the day, and will the State Convention usurp this power too? We sincerely trust not.

Will the delegates to the State Convention from the different congressional districts exercise this power? We sincerely trust that they will not.

By all means, let these district delegates be chosen by a district Convention called for this expressed purpose.

And then let us send an unpledged and untrammelled delegation to St. Louis. The people of the State are unpledged to any particular man, however the politicians may be bound.

Syracuse, March 15.—The Greenback Convention assembled to-day. Committees on permanent organization and resolutions were appointed, Ex-Speaker Mc Guire is temporary chairman. Reces.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

SENATOR RANSOM.

The National Landmark says the strategy of the Radicals to protect themselves against the assaults of the Democrats is to send leading men of our party, who are known to be honest, to the House of Representatives, and to have them exposed by the Radicals. The House will not be deterred by the Radicals' tactics. The people will turn from Radicals with disgust because they will see it is not on other names for thievery. One thing the Committee should remember, that whenever their conditions are that a Democrat has been a party to any of this thievery, that he should be treated exactly as the Radicals are now exposed without fear or favor. What the people want is the certainty that they will have honest men in office. They do not care as much for the name, will not be misled by the name, but whether he is honest and competent. They want a return to the Jeffersonian doctrine of the House. The Democrats in the House can prove their patriotism for this reform. The return to this principle, by exposing the Democratic thievery, they find they are actually doing it. So far the record of the House is good, though not so good as it should have been. The House differences in the party should have been settled sooner. After a long time they have agreed, but they should not have been so tardy in doing it. Then they have in some instances deferred too much to what might or might not be popularity in the campaign. Prompt and united action on their part would have given popularity to any good measure. This has been most notably shown in the bill to aid in the construction of the Texas and Pacific Railroad. The Committee long since agreed upon a bill, which all, who have considered the question fully, agree would be of incalculable benefit to the country, and yet this bill is retarded because there are some, who admitting its necessity, are afraid that it might injure "the party" by being forward. When the house of Jay Gould said that they would spend a sea load of money to defeat this bill, it is remembered, the men who cause this delay make themselves liable to unpleasant comments. Then the appropriation bills have been delayed too much. It is true that it required an immense amount of labor to get all the data necessary to make the proper reductions from the extravagant radical estimate; but with more help it could have been done earlier.

I make these comments, because our Democratic papers should speak frankly to the people. The Congressmen can know what the people expect of them. No elaborate platform building in Congress is wanted. All that is needed is to secure victory and good government, in an honest way of the present day. And therefore I say that while Congress has done well, it might have done better.

Mr. Helknap returned and testified before the Judiciary Committee which will present the articles of impeachment against Helknap to the Senate on Tuesday or Wednesday, of next week. His testimony has been taken before the Grand Jury and it is supposed that the indictment and trial for bribery will follow the impeachment trial.

The Republican Senators have determined to resist the reductions of expenditures made in the house. A motion was held on the subject and this determination is the result of that caucus. They will claim that the reduction proposed will impair the efficiency of the civil service and will use as their campaign argument on this subject the plain cry that the Democrats are trying to cripple the government. This is to be an adjunct to the "bloody shirt," which it seems to be the banner, under which the radical cohorts will march, no matter who may be their standard bearer. The action of the New York Convention in endorsing Conkling is a serious blow to Blaine, as Conkling hates Blaine and if he cannot be nominated himself will use the delegation from his State to defeat Blaine. Among Democratic candidates for the St. Louis nomination, the name of Judge Thurman is now very prominent, perhaps more so than that of any one else except Governor Hendricks. Thides seems to have been dropped, though when the Convention meets he will be a most formidable competitor and Pendleton is out of politics now. The news from abroad is of no interest. Queen Victoria has been given the title of Empress of India and Spain is entirely at Peace. The rebellion in Turkey is still in progress, but small progress is made.

The Milton Chronicle says: How are the Delegates to the Democratic Conservative Convention to be held at St. Louis to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President to be appointed? Of course the State Convention to assemble at Raleigh will appoint the two delegates at large to which the State is entitled. But how are the district delegates to be appointed? Centralization is the order of the day, and will the State Convention usurp this power too? We sincerely trust not.

Will the delegates to the State Convention from the different congressional districts exercise this power? We sincerely trust that they will not.

By all means, let these district delegates be chosen by a district Convention called for this expressed purpose.

And then let us send an unpledged and untrammelled delegation to St. Louis. The people of the State are unpledged to any particular man, however the politicians may be bound.

Syracuse, March 15.—The Greenback Convention assembled to-day. Committees on permanent organization and resolutions were appointed, Ex-Speaker Mc Guire is temporary chairman. Reces.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the minds of the nation are manifestly weak, and their hearts just as manifestly sorrowful.

The editor of the Southside Sentinel writes, to his paper: Baltimore is even more depressed than Richmond or Petersburg. When you inquire the cause, the response seems to be universal, that it is lack of confidence in the governmental departments; that the

